DownloadFriday, February 01, 2008 The Senior Chef We decided today, that it was time to move to a new apartment. This is something I would have waited and saved for retirement, but since my wife is retiring at the beginning of July we will be moving at the end of February. I worked hard and I worked hard for years in my career, and I have paid my dues. Now it is time to retire and I am not ready. This is a tough pill to swallow, but it is reality and I just have to face it. I have had a lot of offers to take on other jobs. I have turned down just about every one. A small town like Miller is not going to go easy on me. I have never left that town before and I am not looking forward to it. My wife and I have our own house on the outskirts of town and I would probably have to move her. I am not sure exactly when I will be ready to retire. There are so many things I want to do in the meantime. I will have to drop a few more pounds to hit the 4-foot height requirement for starters. I want to spend more time with my family and so far, the work schedule has not been favorable for that. I want to be able to travel more and so far that is hard to do. And, yes, I would like to golf a little more. I will miss the job. I have known the owners for over 10 years, and have worked with the boys for even longer. They are my "kids" and I have learned to

The Saudi energy minister on Sunday called the suspension of a 30-year agreement "irresponsible and counterproductive," per Bloomberg, and Saudi Arabia has threatened to close the only oil pipeline it shares with Iran. Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif said in a tweet, "This unilateral action from #SaudiArabia is dangerous." Saudi Arabia's exit would be a severe blow to efforts to lower oil's contribution to global warming. In 2009, the countries launched the accord, billed at the time as a "win-win" deal that would reduce the two countries' emissions, allay prices of conventional oil, and facilitate energy trade. Iran says it is renegotiating the deal's terms to make them more in line with its nation's conditions. you do realize that oil isn't going to get shut down because of this, right? meaning no gas station will run out of gas.
