What can Photoshop do? Painting, drawing, photo manipulations, fixing retouching, color correcting, adding effects, text: all of it is possible in Photoshop. It is not limited to simply altering photos. It is also a graphic design application that enables photographers and artists to design objects and print materials. Photoshop also has the ability to make movies and motion graphics. (Note: An HD video production is a completely different story than editing.) Photoshop supports over 200 types of media, including.png,.tif,.jpg,.emf,.psd, and.dng. It has support for JPEG, JPEG 2000, PNG, True Type Fonts, Flash, BMP, and TIFF, among others. Q: Problems implementing UIActivityViewController on iPhone 4S I have created a NSObject derived class and a UIActivityViewController subclass that handles a specific activity (name and button text are hard coded). I register this object by calling -[NSObject conformsToProtocol:] on the UIActivityViewController subclass, and then call -[UIActivityViewController setExpectedContentTypes:] and -[UIActivityViewController setActivityItems:]. The code works fine in all 3 iPad, iPhone, iPod Touch simulations and on my iPhone 3G. I am however experiencing issues with the iPhone 4S. I have two issues. Even when I confirm that the custom activity is present in UIActivityController by calling activityItems, the UIActivityController does not display the activity items. The only way that the activity items are displayed is by calling -[UIActivityViewController setExpectedContentTypes:] and -[UIActivityViewController setActivityItems:] myself. When I create the activity view controller in the iPhone 4S simulator, all of the text fields appear blank. Debugging shows that I am able to successfully present this view controller using the same object and activity protocols, but that I am unable to set the activity items. The custom activity is defined as follows. + (void)copy { NSAutoreleasePool *pool = [[NSAutoreleasePool alloc] init]; NSString *filepath = [[NSBundle mainBundle] pathForResource:@"TPL_Copy" ofType:@"txt"]; NSString *destinationPath = [filepath stringByDeletingLastPathComponent]; NSURL *fileUrl = [NSURL fileURLWithPath:filepath]; NSData *data = [NSData dataWithContentsOfURL:fileUrl]; [data writeToFile:destinationPath atomically:YES]; [NSObject conformsToProtocol:@protocol(UIActivityItemSource)]; UIActivityViewController *activityViewController = [[UIActivityViewController alloc] initWithActivityItems:@[@"This is a text file", @"This is another text file"] applicationActiv

Q: Java ASM - Display contents of Field I'm using ASM library to display the contents of a field, but I get an error: Exception in thread "main" java.lang.ClassFormatError: Illegal access to constant field My code is: class A { public String name; } class B extends A { public String language; } public class Main { public static void main(String[] args) { Class aClass = Main.class.getClassLoader().loadClass("A"); Field aClassField = aClass.getDeclaredField("name"); System.out.println("name: " + aClass.name); Class bClass = Main.class.getClassLoader().loadClass("B"); Field bClassField = bClass.getDeclaredField("language"); System.out.println("language: " + bClass.name); // ASM aClass.getDeclaredField("name").set("abc"); System.out.println("OK"); bClass.getDeclaredField("language").set("def"); System.out.println("OK"); } } But in the first call of System.out.println, I get the error. A: Statically, fields are initialized to null, and you're trying to use the field after having set it to null. You need to do this instead: Class aClass = Main.class.getClassLoader().loadClass("A"); Field aClassField = aClass.getDeclaredField("name"); aClassField.set(null, "abc"); System.out.println("name: " + aClass.name); Q: Android: Specific Database Error Edit: I finally got it to work. See below for details. Android: Specific Database Error I'm using a database with the following layout
