The professional-oriented manufacturer released an impressive lineup of lens-cameras and mirrorless bodies a couple of years ago, and now it has once again taken the role of the company in charge of its more affordable segment. Introducing the Olympus PEN E-P5, the manufacturer's first mass-market digital camera that offers manual and aperture control. The E-P5 joins last year's E-P3 in Olympus's line-up, which put the focus back on portability and easier usability rather than value, usually the goals of the company's more modest models. Olympus PEN E-P5 The E-P5 is equipped with an 8.1MP Exmor R CMOS sensor, which is a rather modest stepping-up compared to what we saw on its predecessor, the E-P3. Nevertheless, the manufacturer claims that the cam offers a higher-than-average dynamic range for its class, and it is certainly a welcome addition to Olympus's product portfolio. In guinea pig skin, Evans blue is taken up by mast cells in vitro with a $t_{1/2}$ of 1.5 h. This staining is abolished by an antiserum against a mast cell glycoprotein (P3: low molecular weight factor) as well as by an antibody against chymase but not by an antibody against substance P. Incubation of mast cells with purified P3 and an antibody to chymase also blocks the uptake of Evans blue. A large proportion of mast cells in the dermis contain immunoreactivity for chymase but not for substance P, thus identifying a subpopulation of mast cells which may take up the P3 factor.Q: Unit testing a function using Moq and Moq.Expect I have a function, which is loaded as part of an MVC project using a plugin architecture. It takes a value from a control, and stores it in a database. I want to write a unit test which passes successfully when I run it using NUnit, but I can't figure out a way to do it. The method doesn't return anything - there is no action to return a result from, just a value, which is then used further down in the function. Here's the code for the function: `public static void StoreValue(object sender, EventArgs e) { var isValidated = false; db.SavePropertyDetails(this.PropertyId, sender.ToString(), this.Value, this.UnitOfMeasureId, DateTime.Now, isValidated); if (isValidated) { SendNotification(); } }` Here's the code for the unit test: `[TestMethod] public void TestStoreValue() { var mockPlugin = new Mock<>(); mockPlugin.Setup(x => x.Sender).Returns(this.Property.Id); mockPlugin.Setup(x => x.Value).Returns(" 3e33713323`
