Asked 4 years, 1 month ago by Luka Nokia on Icon Plugin for Photoshop 2 answers Answers answer 1 I have never used Photoshop myself, but I am making the assumption here that the vector format you are using is smart, and includes the alpha channel for you. So, if you are creating transparency in the same layer, it will probably look fine in the end. The method you chose to add the images to the vector layer depends on which type of vector format you are using. The easiest way to add the images to the vector layer if it is any of the other formats is to use the Content-Aware Fill command. Check out this article to learn more, and to see if that is the best option for you. Please remember, if you are using any of the other vector formats, they don't include an alpha channel. Scenario 1: " If the vector format does not have an alpha channel, it is possible to add the images to the layer as described in one of the other answers above. However, all your layers in the image will be visible in the layer pallet. If this is the case, you might consider creating your icons into a new image, and placing that into the "place" icon on the spot where you want to display it. I am not sure how to directly change the transparency of the individual layers within the icon. Scenario 2: " " That's correct, if the vector format doesn't have an alpha channel. However, if you want to control what parts of the images are transparent, you can create a new image, the same size as the original, and copy each individual

Q: SSRS: How to pass date parameter value from query I am working on SSRS 2008R2 using SQL SERVER 2008. I have a query that has a parameter whose value I pass via a query to the stored procedure that is executed by the report. The problem I am having is that I would like the value of the date parameter to be dependent on the current date. `SELECT *, WEEKDAY(GETDATE()) AS [Day] FROM my_table` How can I make this parameter dependent on the current date? A: You don't pass a parameter value to the query, you pass a parameter value and expressions in the query. For example, you could use DATEADD in your query to get the date you want, like this: `SELECT *, DATEADD(day, DATEDIFF(day, 0, GETDATE()), 0) FROM my_table`

Q: Screen events not getting caught I created a Screen object in Java (using JavaFX). I add some mouse over listeners to the object. When I mouse over the object, those listeners are not being called. I don't understand how that is possible, since mouse over should always be
