Bradykinin-induced contraction of porcine coronary arteries: role of extracellular Ca²⁺ and endothelium. The contractile response to bradykinin (BK) and serotonin (5-HT) was investigated in ring segments of the porcine coronary artery. BK caused a concentration-dependent contraction, and 5-HT caused a relaxation of the smooth muscle. The contraction induced by BK (1 nmol/l to 1 μmol/l) was abolished by treatment with the B2 receptor antagonist HOE 140 (H-D-Arg-[Hyp³,Thi⁵,D-Tic⁷,Oic⁸]-BK, 10 μmol/l), and was unaffected by treatment with the B1 receptor antagonist des-Arg⁹-BK (10 μmol/l). The contractile response to 5-HT (1 nmol/l to 100 μmol/l) was enhanced by treatment with the calcium antagonist nifedipine (10 μmol/l), but it was unaffected by treatment with the calcium ionophore A 23187 (10 μmol/l). In endothelium-denuded rings,

To study the prevalence of risk factors and serum levels of C-reactive protein (CRP) in the patients with aortic and mitral valve diseases. We studied the prevalence of risk factors and serum levels of CRP in the patients with aortic and mitral valve diseases (n = 100). The prevalence of risk factors in the patients with aortic valve disease was significantly lower than the prevalence of risk factors in the patients with mitral valve disease (P 1. Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to systems and methods for measuring and adjusting a magnetic field. Certain embodiments relate to a system and method for measuring and adjusting a magnetic field by using passive acoustic sensors. 2. Description of the Related Art Measurements of the magnetic field of an electric wire have been found to be useful in determining whether a wire is live and also in monitoring the health of an electric wire. The magnetic field of an electric wire is generally sensed by using an inductive magnetic field sensor, a Hall Effect sensor, or a flux gate sensor. The electric wire may then be monitored in terms of its health, e.g., by using the sensed magnetic field information. In this manner, the electric wire can be protected from harm.
