Download Saawan Ko Aane Do 720p. Q: What's a proper way to flush (abort) a Hibernate transaction? To prevent Hibernate from doing anything too fancy in the background it seems like I need to call commit or rollback on the session object before my transaction finishes. But what's the proper way to flush or abort the transaction? Should I just call session.flush()? A: You can also use "hibernate.flushmode" property. Hibernate will use best cached method. Read this For details: A: If you're building a Java EE application with JPA: JPA 2.1 Spec: Spec for Hibernate: Based on the above, flush() should be enough to abort a Hibernate transaction. However, flush() should be a no-op if called on an unsaved instance. FILED NOT FOR PUBLICATION f30f4ceada
