The New York Times reports: “The push to rebrand the moral discourse of nationalism has taken on a new urgency in recent months because of public backlash against American migrants. With the help of an anonymous donor, the Trump campaign recently set up a series of pop-up churches across the country, two people briefed on the operation said, to speak to the power of Christianity in the United States and to promote conservative religious beliefs that the president is waging an existential war against.”]]>What Does God Think of Borders and Walls?

Mon, 15 Nov 2016 04:22:35 +0000
Cobb, writing for Religion News Service, discusses the purpose of borders, walls and immigration: Borders and walls are physical manifestations of injustice in the world. They were made to keep people in and those out. But now we know that injustice is a zero-sum game. If one person wins it is because another loses. And even if we can agree that injustice is a thing, we cannot just build walls to keep it out. Either we must take the side of 570a42141b
