Menu / Tools / Delphi Components / Serial Port.Q: Bundling assets with Webpack 3 on react-native 0.59.8 I'm having some trouble bundling an app with webpack3 on react-native. I have a bunch of files that I want bundled up and laid out with code splitting in a similar way to lodash-es' import module from. The issue that I have is that it seems that webpack3 is unable to find /node_modules/@babel/runtime/core-js/esnext/reflect.js on the build system when doing a webpack build. By installing as a dependency like so: yarn add acdlite core-js core-js-compat It appears that Webpack is able to find es6-shim and the core modules but not core-js itself. Interestingly the issue doesn't seem to be directly related to acdlite, but only with core-js. I have seen many issues with core-js which I think might be related, but none of them seem to have specific solutions. I am using webpack-bundle-tracker as my babel loader, and it has an option debug which I'm using for this. I've tried toggling it on and off and have also tried adding a webpack.config.js file to no avail. Any help or insight into this issue would be very welcome. Edit: To clarify, I've also tried using webpack for bundling webpack's own shared object, but this also appears to be unable to find reflect.js. I would have thought that including it in my app would just work but it doesn't. Edit 2: As far as I understand, webpack doesn't necessarily need to look in node_modules/ for core-js, because it's already embedded in the babel-runtime code. So it seems that the issue is actually somewhere in the babel pipeline. Edit 3: I was able to get core-js working by specifying the directory it's located in as a dependency for webpack. This is not ideal
