The system is a Windows version of G6 that includes a bunch of well-known automation tools; there are about a dozen features that are completely new and completely different from the standard G6. Mac OS X and linux versions of G6 and Yei are available as well. To help for getting started with YFF: 1. Use the Yei Ruby API to query G6. Download the latest version of Yei. 2. G6 requires a Yei JAR file for Java. The jar file is located at. Yei JAR files can be found at Yei's site. 3. Install Yei JAR files in your Java installation and restart your Java terminal. See Jei install page for more information on Yei JAR files. In the case of Windows version, "java" is usually the process to restart. The second method simply downloads Yei and extracts it. 4. Run./yff.rb and Yei turns on. A window appears: Initialization complete. 5. Press Enter to open the new window. Just type a command to start YFF. For example, to run YFF automatically (instead of typing a command each time) in the system startup, you can edit ~/.bashrc to add the following line: 6. Save and close the file. After that, you can open Yei and use it. Jul 13, 2019 intext://burke.namespace.gov/actions/subscribe. You will need internet access. You will need 570a42141b
