Brings order to your messag... This software is an email client for the X86 platform, it allows users to manage all their email accounts in just one window. It is designed to be as easy to use as possible and has a clean interface. The application is compatible with multiple email protocols including POP3, IMAP4 and SMTP. What it does: This program will search your email messages for keywords of your choice and save the search results into a searchable text file. Small tool for creating XML based e-mails. It uses predefined templates. There are 20 built-in templates, each template contains basic information for a message (subject, recipient, date etc.). You can save the created XML e-mail to file and send it later. Also it is possible to create the message directly in the e-mail interface. Memory Locker is a Windows utility that provides a very simple interface to lock and unlock portions of the Windows memory as defined by a list of memory addresses. Memory Locker does not allow you to change the address list, nor can it search memory for RAM areas. What it does: The program allows you to lock sections of memory as defined by a list of addresses and unlock them if needed. Memory Locker also allows you to turn off Windows Task Manager, which is good for making sure that you are not inadvertently locking up your PC or accessing a restricted Windows area while the memory is locked. the finding that EV71-infected human cells displayed similar virulence in A129 mice as EV71-infected monkey cells. The increased lethality of A129 mice was also observed for mice infected with EV71 in the presence of recombinant MxA, and our data is consistent with the previously published data. MxA is a soluble IFN-inducible antiviral protein. It binds to the nucleocapsid of all types of RNA viruses, where it prevents the binding of viral replication and transcription complexes to viral mRNA ([@bib0026]). Studies in the mouse model have demonstrated that the induction of MxA by IFN- α/β is sufficient to protect animals against neurotropic enteroviruses, and MxA expressing transgenic mice were resistant to paralytic poliovirus disease ([@bib0015], [@bib0027]). The study also showed that the MxA protein could be produced in the presence of rhIFN- β . In the mice, MxA and rhIFN- β showed an additive effect on protecting against EV71 infection. Thus, this finding confirms the previously reported findings that MxA enhances the antiviral activity of type I IFN ([@bib0004]). In summary, this study has demonstrated that the IFN- α/β /MxA signaling pathway plays an important role in protecting the A129 mice from EV71
