You'll find tutorials and resources to help you get started, and a selection of layouts and templates to get you going. Unleashing Image Editor's power You can count on Photoshop to keep up with the digital world with changes to its tools and techniques that enable you to edit your images in a manner never seen before. The following lists some of the more powerful features in Photoshop: Layer style: In addition to using a layer for each of the image elements, Photoshop enables you to add style with effects, transparency, and masks. Layer styles can be altered and changed to deliver different looks. Effects and filters: The Effects menu is where Photoshop features its filters, which enable you to change the look of a photo. You can add or subtract color, sharpen an image, and more. Filters enable you to retouch images, change exposure, and add special effects. Drawing tools: In addition to pixels, you can draw lines, shapes, and other graphic elements with the Drawing tools. Moving items: You can move objects in an image. Use the Move tool for this task, as shown in Figure 2-7.

Painting tools: Photoshop includes a complete set of drawing tools for creating shapes and objects. In addition to pens, brushes, and airbrushes, you have a selection tool, a marquee tool, and even a selection rectangle. Magic wand: The Magic Wand tool enables you to select areas of pixels based on color, sharpness, and size. Lens blur: Photoshop uses standard lenses to create the effects. You can apply lens blur to an image or create your own effect lens. Plug-ins: Photoshop includes a selection of plug-ins for various image effects. For more on using plug-ins, see Chapter 13. Mixer brush: The Mixer Brush allows you to blend colors to create a new color. Smooth: Photoshop enables you to smooth edges and add soft edges to an image. Spot healing: This feature can remove pixelization, dust spots, and other issues from an image. Toning: This technique enables you to add or remove color from an image, as well as change the color of an object. Color harmonies: This feature enables you to apply color harmonies that add more of a specific color in your image.

Q: How to say I want to start helping but I'm only good at fixing small problems? I'm a 27 y/o woman and I really want to start working towards becoming a mentor to kids in a development program, but unfortunately, I have a lot of trouble fixing small problems. Basically, I am not really a computer person, at all, and I don't have a lot of interest in computers or technology in general. I'm not saying I don't want to help children, I do. I'm just saying that when I do try to help them, I can only help them fix a small problem in their computer, like their browser or something, and I don't know how to fix bigger problems. I would love to help kids learn to code, but I don't even know how to use Google Code, my favorite programming software. How should I word this in a resume?

A: It seems that you're saying something like: I would love to help kids learn to code, but I don't know how to use Google Code, my favorite programming software. Basically, people will read that and think that you don't know how to use a powerful tool. There are a lot of kids in need of help. You don't know a lot about software, but the kids you do know about are good at finding solutions on their own. It is time to learn about programming, and about software. It's okay to be able to fix one small problem, but not okay to not be able to fix more complicated problems. "Not being able to fix more complicated problems" is an excuse. If you say that you're not as good with computers or technology in general, which I don't think you're doing, it's not really an excuse. Let's say you work at a computer repair shop and you fix computers for a living. You wouldn't get a job there if you said "I work at a computer repair shop but I don't know how to fix the hard drives or the hard drives don't work anymore." There's nothing you can do to fix the hard drives, because you can't fix them. So, based on what I said, I'd suggest you saying something like: I am interested in learning how to help kids learn programming. I don't know very much about computers, but I
