This study examined the effect of an oral P-glycoprotein inhibitor on the pharmacokinetics of lidocaine when administered concomitantly with paroxetine. In this phase I, open-label, randomized, two-period crossover study, healthy subjects received single oral doses of lidocaine (50 mg) and paroxetine (20 mg) alone or concomitantly on day 1 and day 8 of each 8-day treatment period in the absence or presence of cimetidine (400 mg). Plasma concentrations of lidocaine and its primary metabolite monoethylglycinexylidide (MEGX) were determined up to 72 hours after each dose. Co-administration of lidocaine and paroxetine significantly increased the area under the plasma concentration-time curve from 0 to 72 hours (AUC(0-
