Not All Is Pixel Perfect Although the idea of looking at your image and then using pixels to measure it may seem to be strictly a digital concept, the very same concept can apply to visual arts. The same thing applies to understanding what painting you can do with different paints or with brushstrokes of varying widths. When working with a real brush on a real canvas, a painting that includes too many brushstrokes or paints that are too wide or contain too much color will make the picture look messy and lumpy. The same applies to a photograph — no matter how large a resolution it has, it may not all look pixel perfect. When you zoom in on your image with a microscope, you'll notice that there are different levels of detail on your image, and the areas that contain the most detail stand out. Likewise, areas that contain no detail are not visible in the image, leaving out the areas that aren't important. That's because the camera's sensor isn't very accurate. The invention relates to a cartridge structure for medical purposes, wherein the cartridge includes a component, which is at least movable in a reciprocating manner in an axial direction, wherein the movement of the component is transmitted to a cylinder which is located movably in the cartridge, by means of a piston rod which is arranged in the cylinder and which is movable in an axial direction, wherein the piston rod is guided in the cylinder, in a non-positive manner, in particular, slideably, while being able to execute pivoting movements about an axis in a non-positive manner, in particular, slideably, wherein the component is in particular at least one medical valve, a peristaltic pump including such a medical valve, a valve-on-tip or a catheter, in particular, a balloon catheter. Such a cartridge structure, in particular, a cartridge structure which contains at least one medical valve, is known, for example, from DE 10 2007 044 872 B3. This patent application thus discloses a collapsible, in particular, elastic and elastic-plastic, self-inflating valve which is intended to be used in particular for a catheter system, in particular, a stent delivery system. The known catheter cartridge structure has a cylindrical housing with a plunger element which is movable in the axial direction. This cylindrical housing includes a plunger rod for guiding the plunger element in the housing, while permitting a reciprocating movement of the plunger element relative to the cylinder. By means of a displacement device which acts upon the plunger rod and is accommodated in the cylindrical housing, the plunger rod is supported during the reciprocating movement of the plunger element. A disadvantage of the known cartridge structure is that the piston rod of the displacement device is held, in a non-positive manner, in the cylinder in a manner which is fixed in the axial direction. As a result of this, the respective piston rod is not able to execute any relative movements in the axial direction and thus, is not able to compensate unevennesses of the cylinder into which the piston rod is accommodated, which are, however, to be compensated, for example, for the accommodation of inlets and outlets, and/or the accommodation of a connecting element which connects the piston rod to a displacement device. In order, thus, to be able to use a non-positive holding of the piston rod in the cylinder in a manner

They are the kind of friends who have been there for you through thick and thin, with advice, meal-making, ear-to-ear laughing, smiles and hugs. This goes for their spouses, too. Which is why I stand by what I said, and so will they, and their spouses. I don't want any of us to get in trouble. So, here it is. If you want to have a relationship with a Buddhist, you need to understand that you need to be OK with different lifestyles. You are free to disagree with someone about whatever they do, to any level you want. But, don't be the person who makes a huge fuss about it, and don't belittle their beliefs because you don't share them. Respect their choices, in the same way that you want to be respected. There is no way to get around this. If you aren't willing to be accepting of others' choices, then it's not going to work. Also, don't be surprised if, after they are done, you might be thinking "I get that you don't believe in X, but why did you not tell me that before?" or "How did you go from having no problem with it to now thinking that X is bad?" That's how it works for me. But for others it could be different. For some, having a friend who is Buddhist may be the only thing that makes their life look okay. They may have never thought about religion in an alternative way before, and now you have let them know that they are allowed to think about it, and that they are also allowed to have their own opinion about it. That's what friendship is. And that's all that Buddhists need to have a friend
