Adobe Creative Suite.Video: Shaq Gets Slammed From A Young Female Juror Paul Kelly checks in with the latest adult documentary from Adultfilms.com, "Shaq Says What?" The movie features Shaq as he talks about sex, being homeless and his AIDS diagnosis. As Shaq mentions his AIDS diagnosis, a young woman in the jury explodes and tries to interrupt him. Shaq talks to her and give her a lesson in etiquette, prompting two female jurors to leave. It's called "stick to your guns". Check out the Video and Transcript Below. Transcript PAUL KELLY: That's $30 million and a spot in the history books, for both the NBA and the movie industry. Shaquille O'Neal, center, was the director, and his name is up on the screen. The movie is called "Shaq Says What?" He tells about his impoverished upbringing in Brooklyn, his short stint in the CBA, making a lot of money and how he decided to give it all away to doctors who looked after him when he was diagnosed with AIDS. Now he's getting ready to go on a cross-country tour to promote his autobiography "Shaq: A Life." SHAQ: I guess I'm happy that my life will be able to put a number on it. I've had a great life with ups and downs. You got to go through certain things. I was just in a wheelchair, and I had to learn to walk again. PAUL KELLY: A documentary about basketball, or life? SHAQ: Sports, I mean, I'm not a people person, but when I first heard about this documentary, I got a little alarmed because I know that if I go to some city and they expect me to give a
