Purpose Autodesk has stated that AutoCAD was originally developed for architectural designers. Development Autodesk claims that AutoCAD was developed in response to a request for a vector graphics editing system made by the New York Central Railroad (NYC) in 1979. NYC had asked for a vector graphics editing system to help design and manage the Empire Corridor, the major railroad in the New York metropolitan area. They also wanted to be able to draw railroad maps of the New York metropolitan area, to produce in-house technical publications for the railroad. History The first release of AutoCAD was AutoCAD 0.1, released in December 1982 on the first Texas Instruments TI99/4A. The first release was announced on October 6, 1982. The software was released on the Apple II in 1983, though Autodesk said that the Apple II was used for beta testing and quality assurance. AutoCAD was released for the Apple Macintosh in 1984, released on October 1, 1984. It was the first major 2D CAD program available for the Macintosh. By 1986, the software had reached version 1.1. In 1987 Autodesk released AutoCAD 8, which incorporated the new unified CAD system. The most recent release of AutoCAD was AutoCAD 2018, released in May 2018. In February 2018, Autodesk announced that it was working on a new CAD application for mobile and web. In October 2018, the company announced that AutoCAD 3D was available on Microsoft Windows, macOS, and mobile devices. AutoCAD 2018 was released in May 2018 and supports Windows, macOS, and Android and iOS devices. AutoCAD 3D is available for Windows, macOS, and iOS. Technology Editing The original design goal for AutoCAD was to implement drawing vector graphics with no loss of accuracy. There are two primary types of editing in AutoCAD: the wireframe model and the fill model. The wireframe model is used for design and construction work; the fill model is used for production drawing. The wireframe model is similar to vector graphics editing systems developed by Vectorworks and AutoCAD 2D Drafting. In the wireframe model, each line of the drawing has a unique ID and a stroke width. In the fill model, each fill box has a unique ID, and fill color and weight are calculated
