[Tumor-associated antigen NK cells suppress the immune responses of effector cells and promote tumor growth in mouse models]. Natural killer (NK) cells are members of the innate immune system, and recognize and kill tumor cells without prior sensitization. Recently, however, it has become clear that NK cells can induce, rather than kill, tumor cells by modulating the growth and behavior of tumor cells. In this article, we would like to summarize recent progress in our understanding of the significance of NK cells in tumor biology and discuss their mechanisms of action. Although NK cells have the potential to kill tumor cells, they can also provide a protective effect against tumor development. Our recent studies have indicated that NK cells can induce apoptosis in tumor cells by up-regulating FasL and perforin expression, as well as down-regulate the expression of cellular and vascular adhesion molecules. The third effector function of NK cells is related to their ability to induce certain cytokines and chemokines. Through a series of investigations, we have recently demonstrated that NK cells can suppress the immune responses of effector cells, and promote tumor growth in mouse models. * * JBoss, Home of Professional Open Source. * Copyright 2018, Red Hat, Inc., and individual contributors * as indicated by the @author tags.
