Creating a resource for staff, students, and the community to access information regarding the coaching profession. Tuesday, January 27, 2015 How to Become a Coaching Mentor Have you ever considered becoming a coaching mentor? The mentoring network I manage has been busy this month and has started a new mentoring program that you may be interested in learning more about. Here are the details: - Sign up as an NCAA accredited mentor (mentor) by the NCAA coaching mentoring service at coachingmentorship.com. You can do it online and apply through the NSCA (National Strength and Conditioning Association) website. - Start by completing the online application. There are questions regarding your relationship with your organization, education/coaching experience, and state you plan to spend your time. Also, your applicant ID number will be emailed to you. This is something that will take care of as you move forward. - You will be asked to participate in the National Mentoring Project (NMP), an NSCA survey to learn about the current mentoring climate. This is an important step in the process as it helps to generate information about what other mentors are experiencing. - Mentors are then assigned a "lead mentor" based on their coaching experience. This can be someone they know or a representative of their organization. - Mentors and lead mentors then receive a mentor training packet which includes information about the rules of the NMP, a case study based on a real mentoring experience, and a document to reference when questions come up. The case study can be used to understand the principles behind the mentoring process and can be used to answer questions from a mentor or the applicant. - Once a lead mentor is assigned, an email is then sent to all mentors outlining the mentoring process and what can be expected. - Mentors are then emailed about 8-10 questions to answer based on the case study and to respond to questions that the lead mentor has. Mentors can either use their experience as an answer to the questions or use the 5-10 days you have to work through the questions to come up with their own answers. - At the end of this time you will receive a letter with the answers to the questions and a thank you note from the lead mentor. Your mentoring experience will then officially start on April 1 (this is when mentors start applying for mentees) and your mentors will receive their own
