CCAAT/enhancer-binding proteins (C/EBPs) are members of the basic region leucine zipper (bZIP) family of transcription factors. While C/EBPbeta, C/EBPdelta, and C/EBPepsilon are similar in sequence and structure, the pattern of their cellular expression is different. The mechanism underlying this difference in expression level has not been investigated. C/EBPbeta, C/EBPdelta, and C/EBPepsilon share a similar C-terminal regulatory domain. We hypothesized that differences in cellular expression of C/EBPdelta and C/EBPepsilon may be due to differences in the C-terminal regulatory domain. We showed that specific polymorphisms at the two proline (P) codons of the C-terminal regulatory domain of C/EBPdelta, P7 and P9, determine the expression pattern of C/EBPdelta in cells. These two polymorphisms are also present in C/EBPepsilon, and the cell lines used to express this protein revealed the same pattern of expression as that of C/EBPdelta. In contrast, C/EBPbeta has three different polymorphisms, P2, P5, and P9, and the cell lines expressed two isotypes of this protein, varying in the level of transcription, with a bias to the non-P5/P9 isoform. Mutations of the P7 or P9 position in the wild-type C/EBPdelta construct that reduced its cellular level increased the transcriptional activity of the P7, P9, and wild-type C/EBPdelta constructs, whereas C/EBPbeta with the P5, P7, and P9 mutations had a reduced transcriptional activity. These results demonstrate that the C-terminal regulatory domain determines the expression level of the C/EBP proteins and are consistent with C/EBPdelta being a dominant-negative inhibitor of C/EBP

The monsters that once infested the lands are now gaining strength, and are growing more numerous and vicious. The Elden Lords who once governed the Lands Between and held the balance between the world and the monsters are gone. All that remains are the weak rulers who are unable to protect the land and themselves. The only one who can stop these monsters from destroying the world is... YOU. You must go to the otherworldly world of the Elden Ring and defeat all of the monsters that stand in your way in order to save the world. You must meet new characters, earn their love and trust, and learn the skills that they can teach you. The only way to save the world is to put all of the lands back in order. HOW TO PLAY: THE GAME STARTS FROM A SCENE WHERE YOU ARE ON THE BRIDGE OF A CRASHED SHIP. The screen will start in the game, and you have to press left or right to open the world map. Click the head icon to select your character. Select the color of your character from one of three types. Then create a "Team" and prepare for a battle.
