We have a very basic nginx configuration that looks like this: `server { listen 80; server_name example.com; location / { if ($http_x_forwarded_proto!= "http") { rewrite ^/(.)$ } proxy_pass } }` Now we have a lot of requests that are coming in as example.com and we want to set it up so that those requests are actually sent directly to the proxy (as it is not expected to be done through the normal path) Anyone can help with a few pointers? A: Try: `if ($http_x_forwarded_proto!= "http" && $request_uri =~ /^/example\.com) { rewrite ^/(.)$ }` The `"/$"` pattern evaluates the request URI to a string and then replaces it with the contents of the requested URL if it matches. If it matches, the variable will contain whatever URI is being requested. Q: Why isn't there a "measure" command in the pftex

The EIA said U.S. natural gas production is expected to average 12.77 bcf/d in 2014, up 2.1 percent from 2013 and up 12.7 percent from 2012. The EIA estimated U.S. natural gas production averaged 10.4 bcf/d in 2013. U.S. exports of natural gas will exceed import volumes for the first time on record, the EIA forecast. The EIA expects U.S. natural gas export volumes will average 2.6 bcf/d in 2014, up 6.2 percent from 2013 and up 4.0 percent from 2012. EIA said that the increased export volumes will reflect the continued growth of new markets. The U.S. will be able to export natural gas to Canada for the first time on record in 2014, and also begin exporting natural gas to the Philippines, India and Thailand, the agency said. In addition, a new export pipeline is being constructed along the East Coast, which will spur U.S. exports to Asia. The Dakota Access Pipeline, owned by Energy Transfer Partners, will begin commercial operation in early 2016, according to the EIA. The proposed pipeline will transport oil from the Bakken region of North Dakota to the Gulf Coast and enable U.S. exports of oil to Asia, the EIA said. The U.S. will be "actively involved in the global natural gas market" for the first time since the 2008 financial crisis, the EIA said. Apigenin regulates ATG5-ATG12 axis-dependent autophagy via PI3K/AKT/mTOR signaling pathway. Autophagy is a cellular degradation process for protein and organelles that is involved in the development of autophagy-related diseases. Apigenin is a natural plant flavone, which has been proven to have a protective function in the development of vascular disease and in animal models of diabetes. However, the molecular mechanism of apigenin in regulating autophagy remains unclear. To address the molecular mechanism of apigenin-mediated autophagy, we investigated the effect of apigenin on autophagy in human hepatocellular carcinoma cells (HepG2 cells) and human embryonic kidney cells (HEK293T cells). Our results indicated that apigenin can induce autophagy in HepG2 and HEK293T cells via the activation of PI3K/AKT/mTOR signaling pathway. In addition, apigenin reduced intracellular levels of reactive oxygen species (ROS) and the number of apoptotic cells in HepG2 cells. Moreover, overexpression of ATG5 or ATG12 can rescue apigenin-induced autophagy. Taken together, our findings demonstrated for the first time that apigenin can induce aut
