Q: C++ internal stack/heap allocation/deallocation (custom allocator?) Maybe this question is a little far-fetched, but I was wondering if there exists a library in C++ allowing you to define an own memory allocator, making your own allocation/deallocation (as standard C++ does)? For example, I would like to: Allocate an own array of integers Use it as a stack or heap Allocate/deallocate a block of memory with custom size (i.e. allocate an array of custom size, not just a pointer, like `std::vector` does) And so on..

A: There is a type of allocator, called a "custom allocator", which is useful for allocating memory with a custom size, but not much else. If you have a small number of types, you can use one of the tiny allocators. They are simply meant to be small and simple. But they will be run-of-the-mill mallocs and callocs. If you want to do something unusual, you will need a different allocator. The simplest one is the standard allocator. It has been carefully crafted for just this purpose. It uses the standard typedef `std::allocator`, which is an allocator for `T*`. Internally, it uses the C++ type allocator, which is a good basic allocator, but doesn't do much more. If you want your own allocator (or standard allocator) that allocates memory for pointers, you will have to define your own allocator class that knows how to allocate memory for pointers. The standard allocator doesn't know anything like that. Alternatively, you can use the "tiny"

version.Q: What is the purpose of the '/opengraph.json' file? If I want to share a photo on my timeline, what is the purpose of the /opengraph.json file on my server? I mean, why is it also present in the photo's folder? A: /opengraph.json is the canonical file for all OG (Open Graph) properties. /meta.json is the canonical file for all application parameters.

The purpose of this file is to load the application configuration parameters (this file may be omitted if parameters are loaded using the configuration object). Some Open Graph properties are also stored in config files for: Mismatched properties: Facebook - Open Graph Sample (The /fbreader/og:reader-sample) Twitter - Open Graph Sample (The /twitter/open-graph-sample) Entities Facebook
- Open Graph Sample (The /fbreader/og:reader-
sample) Twitter - Open Graph Sample (The /twitter/open-graph-sample) Commenting Facebook - Open Graph Sample (The /fbreader/og:reader-sample) In all these cases, the purpose of the files is to ease development as they give developers tools to get their data into a canonical format.

Diagnosis and treatment of postpartum hemorrhage. Postpartum hemorrhage (PPH) is a major cause of maternal death and morbidity, and is preventable if the appropriate management strategies are initiated promptly. Early recognition and rapid management of PPH can prevent or limit the extent and severity of bleeding. Management of PPH should focus on rapid and accurate diagnosis and treatment, with early referral to a tertiary center or intensive care setting. This is the approach recommended by the International Federation of Gynecologists and Obstetricians Working Group. Obstetricians and gynecologists worldwide should work together to promote the early recognition of PPH, and improve maternal and perinatal outcomes./** * Copyright (c) 2015-present, Facebook, Inc. d0c515b9f4
