Microsoft Visual FoxPro Software is the most complete database development application for Windows, Mac and Linux.Q: How to update value of integer in a list after its being input by the user? I'm trying to make a simple game. In the beginning it should ask for the number of players, for every player in the game one value should be generated. Lets say 1 2 3 4...and so on. These values are stored as integers in a list. I don't know how to update these values. After the players have played I would like to print out the players values, one after another, from highest to lowest. It also it seems that all values remain the same after starting the game. These are the only things I've tried to do. I just don't know how to update the values of the list in every turn of the players.

def counter(): players = [] while True: count = int(input("How many players will be in the game: ")) players.append(count) return players def game(): players = counter() for player in players: players.sort() print("Player %s: %s" % (player, players
