MyHomeTV is a lightweight Windows program whose purpose is to help you connect to different Russian and English TV channels. ...Q: How to reinstall MinGW32 on Windows Server 2008 x64? I have been trying to install MinGW32 on my Windows Server 2008 R2 x64. Since there are no MinGW32 installation media, I thought I could simply download it from the website. I entered a few steps as written below: Install ActiveState Command Line Tools from this link Download MingW32-bin-MSYS1-6.3.exe from this link Open Command Prompt and run the command, "cd \mingw-w64\i686-8.2.0\msys\1.0\"; It will output something like this: C:\Users\Administrator\AppData\Local\Temp\msys\1.0\bin> However, when I try to run the program after that, the "mingw32-gcc" will fail with this exception: C:\Users\Administrator\AppData\Local\Temp\msys\1.0\bin>mingw32-gcc -v --version C:\Users\Administrator\AppData\Local\Temp\msys\1.0\bin>mingw32-gcc --version Compiler: MSYS compiled on: December 10, 2013 gcc version: 4.8.1 20120911 (Red Hat 4.8.1-28) (GCC) So it looks like that compiling version of gcc is too old. Furthermore, I check MinGW version in the official website, which is actually 3.4.3, not 3.5 or 3.6. So it means that this problem is not related to the official release. I have been looking into it and it seems that similar problem has been reported, but no answers have been given. So my question is: How to reinstall MinGW32, and is it possible to get the latest version without having a installation media? A: I see two solutions for you. The first one is the "Right Way" (TM), I recommend to do it only once: Download MinGW
