If you have any questions please contact our support team.Q: T-SQL iterating through multiple result sets I'm not sure how to phrase the title accurately, so I'll just explain what I want to accomplish. I have two SQL queries that I need to run in a loop in T-SQL. The queries return tables (basically, as a book, there are pages with data in them). The first query is a fetch of the pages and the second is the data from that page. The problem I'm having is that I can't seem to figure out how to have SQL Server iterate through the first SQL statement, then the second SQL statement (so, page by page), and create a new result set from the contents of both queries. For instance, say I ran those two queries against one table: select f.id, c.firstName, c.lastName from someTable as s inner join personalTable as p on s.id = p.someId inner join contactTable as c on p.contactId = c.id where f.name = 'foo' select f.id, d.date1, d.date2, d.fullName from someTable as s inner join someDateTable as d on s.id = d.id where f.name = 'foo' order by d.date1 I would love for the result set from the first query to be empty. Then, in the second query, I would like to have, for every row in that result set, the contents of the first table and the contents of the second
