What's new:

: part 3 6 THE BODY AND SOUL OF CARCASSONNE Wednesday was a blistering hot day, and again the sun has used his heat as an excuse to rest. The Weatherman is so punishing; I can't work up to a good day of writing. If I tried to write in the morning that will be the end of our visit, so this evening's session is what I had in mind all day. I decided to look up some information on the walls themselves, though my uncertainty on one matter concerning the origins of these symbols was perplexing. Early theories point to the sheer fact that they are so confusing; confusion was added to date them, the confusion was legitimized. Some scholars deduce that the circles of varying radii are the outermost rings of the "roof" within which lie the spider's tunnels. And, there is the loss of some thought that the spider itself was the symbol of "titulature," representing the power of the church. Jules-Simon Legnaies described them as "inscrutables." One of the smaller wonders was the cyclopean labyrinth in the Palace of the Popes. Mozart played his flute with the palace and described it as "beautiful" while Stendhal felt "crushed." But through it all, Carcassonne has been the intellectual wonder of Europe and was called "the joy of the world." Another theory cites a coin from the late fourth century BC, as one example of the origin, stating that words of "carcassone" possibly meant "fortuitous," or "(the) lucky" as it seemed to a drawing on a stone in 1884. Regardless, the most common of the embellishments of the city center is the famous red, white and blue symbol, CIVIL COMBAT R ÉPUBLICAGE. Thursday evening once again the weatherperson played the role of barometer as he predicted a 110 degree high and sunny day. A balcony bought from Singer's by Lise was opened to the city and the blue sky above. It was too cold to sit out and the sun was full on the back walls and roof of the "poop-box" that contained the main buildings. Cold was a concern; Our stay in this great city is so short that it's decisions are dictated from the outset. Though it is the source of heat and light for millions, it is as cold as a

----- The game has been designed for browser based play (fully multi-player). It also supports two player co-op (or single player with a friend joining in) either in the same session or cross session. It supports an offline mode as well, that will allow to save your progress and access to a community of players that will share their constructions with you. Another thing the game features is the ability to trade with the neighbouring players. That means you can share resources with them (like NPCs) or get them to share materials with you (like Crafting stations). Those trades are possible through portals that players are able to make themselves. Finally, the game provides the player with a wicked evil leader with whom you can build your own secret dungeon. We call that 'Wicked Dungeon Lord'. You can unlock the dungeon and be able to transport your minions to other players dungeons. PS: Although the game is in alpha it has already been developed for a couple of years. Please be patient with the bugs and balance issues. All feedback is welcome. ----- The game features: - Multi-Player - Free form room building (you can make the rooms any shape and any size) - Ultra fast pixel art - 140+ new creatures - Over 30 unique weapons and armours for the creatures - Multi-stage production that allows you to produce several resources - Similar to the Terraria gameplay, you can make a whole series of endless dungeons that can be accessed from anywhere and even from other players dungeons - Monsters are fully controllable, they do not follow your player, their own path and their own actions. You control every aspect of them: AI, voice, movements, appearance, spouting water... - Dungeons are generated on the fly, it means that you can make an endless dungeon of any size - Invisible walls that can capture one or several enemies and transport them to a special room where you can attack them. You can do that using objects found in the dungeon. - Traps - Passable traps with a special animation that you can use to lure in enemies - The dungeon can be expanded using resource generators (very similar to lusus production towers). These are usually placed somewhere in the dungeon. - Over 20 different items to upgrade traps and portals - Cross session and co-op play - Various unbalanced bosses that can only be won by strong humans (or heroes) EDIT: HERE IS THE DUMB MINIONS
