Unilateral and bilateral kidney metastasis due to a neoplastic disease of the pancreatic duct. The authors report the case of a 70-year-old man with recurrent abdominal pain of months duration. Imaging studies showed a large mass in the head of the pancreas, which was associated with peripancreatic lymphadenopathy and a bilateral (right more than left) kidney metastasis. A malignant disease of the pancreatic duct was diagnosed, confirmed by biopsy. Follow-up imaging showed a rapid progression of the disease. Have you ever wondered why we
