Four songs from Bala 2.Longitudinal associations between severe traumatic brain injury and alcohol and drug use. Very little research has examined both alcohol and drug use in people with chronic traumatic brain injury (CTBI). This study examined the relationships between alcohol, drug and other substance use disorders and CTBI. One hundred and forty-nine people with CTBI from an Australian rehabilitation centre completed a retrospective chart review of their current and past CTBI, as well as any substance use and drug use treatment history, and were interviewed by telephone about their past and current drug use. Cross-sectional, longitudinal and repeated measures analyses were conducted on the data from this sample. Measures of severity and frequency of substance use were significantly correlated. However, the current frequency of alcohol use was not related to ongoing alcohol use, severity of past alcohol use or drug use. Retrospective reports of alcohol and drug use were not highly correlated and there was no evidence that the severity of alcohol use increased the frequency of use of other substances. These findings have implications for CTBI research and intervention.1. Field of the Invention The invention relates to a write protection mechanism, a write/erase mechanism and a method of writing and erasing data in a non-volatile memory, and more particularly, to a write protection mechanism, a write/erase mechanism and a method of writing and erasing data in a non-volatile memory using a volatile memory such as a DRAM. 2. Description of the Related Art A non-volatile memory device is different from a volatile memory device in that it does not lose its stored information when power supply is turned off.
