In this reaction, a reaction time can be decided by the composition of the reaction system or the temperature of the reaction system. Typically, the reaction time is one minute to one hour, and the reaction time is preferably one to ten hours. The triarylphosphine is preferably a triphenylphosphine, and the triarylphosphine may be used as it is or may be used after purification by distillation or other process. The phosphorous trichloride or phosphorous tribromide described in the reaction formula is synthesized by a method known in the art such as a method disclosed in the following reference. For example, a method of synthesizing phosphorous trichloride or phosphorous tribromide is described in xe2x80x9cU.S. Pat. No. 3,615,959xe2x80x9d. Furthermore, the raw material 1,4-bis(3-chlorophenyl)butane which is used in the present invention is described below. 1,4-Bis(3-chlorophenyl)butane is a crystal solid and is commercially available. The melting point of 1,4-bis(3-chlorophenyl)butane is 107 to 118xc2x0 C., and the purity is typically more than 99%. However, when a phosphorous trichloride or phosphorous tribromide is used as a raw material, the raw material 1,4-bis(3-chlorophenyl)butane is preferably obtained by obtaining a reaction solution after the reaction and pur b7e8fdf5c8
