Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a process for preparing liquid crystal compositions useful as optical materials. 2. Description of the Related Art Liquid crystal compositions, in general, are classified into two types according to the alignment of the liquid crystal molecules at a liquid crystal/air interface, that is, a type having a homogeneous orientation of the liquid crystal molecules at the liquid crystal/air interface (also referred to as a homogeneous alignment type) and a type having a twisted orientation of the liquid crystal molecules at the liquid crystal/air interface (also referred to as a twisted alignment type). The former type exhibits a direct transition (that is, clear transition from the liquid crystal phase to the air phase) under a high temperature and can be used in wide display applications; however, it is unsatisfactory in its response time. The latter type exhibits a twisted orientation of the liquid crystal molecules at the liquid crystal/air interface, which is classified into two types according to the direction of the twisting. The first type of the twisted orientation type has a twisted orientation of the liquid crystal molecules in a direction of a thickness of the liquid crystal cell, and the other type has a twisted orientation of the liquid crystal molecules in a direction substantially perpendicular to the thickness of the liquid crystal cell. In these days, both of these two types of liquid crystal compositions are being used as display materials. Many of the liquid crystal compositions used in display devices are those mainly comprising compounds having a nematic phase which is a common nematic phase and is represented by the following general formula: ##STR2## wherein R.sup.1 and R.sup.2 are, each independently, a hydrogen atom, an alkyl group, or a fluorine atom or a chlorine atom, provided that R.sup.1 and R.sup.2 may be a same or different group. The above-mentioned nematic liquid crystal compositions can be used as display materials in display devices, such as ferroelectric liquid crystal display devices, antiferroelectric liquid crystal display devices, smectic liquid crystal display devices, polysilicon liquid crystal display
