The system was developed in collaboration with Algi, a world leader in motion capture for video games, and provides visual and objective data for players and staff. This allows for more accurate coaching and training sessions and ultimately helps improve the overall quality of player performance. Additional data collected from the player is used to power a host of new features including Real Player Motion, which captures the players' emotional states and mimics their actions in real-time. Data capture is supported by the world's most comprehensive biomechanical model of the human body. The updated FIFA license, as announced, is the 22nd edition of the franchise and features a number of new additions and refinements to improve gameplay, including an interactive Ultimate Team, Player Experience, Better Instructions, and a New Match Day Mode, alongside many gameplay improvements. EA SPORTS has released the full list of additions and improvements below. Editor's Note: The major updates of the game were initially announced at various press events. Since then, we have found out more about some of them, so we've started to collect them up here and on our community site. Improved Player Experience FIFA 22 introduces a number of new elements to Player Experience; including, for the first time, variable referee animations. FIFA refs now perform different animations in the heat of the action, to create more fluid and reactive gameplay, as well as allow referees to more easily identify illegal actions and calls. The overall progress of a game has been improved to better reflect the authentic pace of real life football, players can take the field with less time to warm-up, and training sessions are now more dynamic. The physio system is improved and now replicates the medical care on the pitch. Players are seen to more actively perform post-match rehabilitation drills, using the medical examination area to recover. The Player Experience interface has been overhauled, allowing for greater player customization options. Player appearance now has a more lifelike look with improved visual details, which can be used to further customize the appearance of players. New standardized facial features, similar to those found in The Journey, are also used to further increase facial customization options. New Social Team Management Features FIFA 22 introduces a new way to manage your team: a one-of-a-kind social experience, inspired by the passion of the team. Like the real team, players can now post messages of encouragement, vent frustration, react to current events in the real world

New contextual crossbars in the same size as the existing ones, to clearly distinguish where the ball can and cannot be crossed On-screen directional pad now allows easy moving and defending direction adjustments New goal line KICKS reflect true reality. To kick the ball in a certain direction, players can move the analogue stick in that direction. Manual adjustment is still possible, with the new manual 'Handbrake' adjustment. Moving the control stick in the opposite direction then cancels the move. Re-worked KICK OFF system giving a better sense of where the ball will go on a kick-off. New 'play the ball' system. This is when players can improvise on a move and the player to receive a pass will move towards the point of reception. This gives the option to the player to run in a different direction, or to pass on to another player by selecting a second player and moving away from the position of the first player. New 'run on to a pass' system. A player can be approached by a teammate and move towards the pass, or pass the ball directly. This can be done manually or automatically. New 'pass to feet' system. Facing a defender, a player can pass the ball to a teammate. The relevant teammate can then choose to pass to a third teammate (also automatically),
