Aside from having to deal with all the racism and sexism rampant in the United States, you're still punished if you don't adhere to a strict dress code. According to the Washington City Paper, the D.C. Police Department has been consistently told by Congress that its code has violated the equal protection clause of the Constitution. The D.C. Police Department enforced a dress code that required women to wear high heels "when the necessity for the same is clearly foreseen." Then, in 2006, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals found that the dress code was an unconstitutional "embarrassment to the
