In Lusitania you can make deals with all the towns and cities of the Atlantic ocean coast, and to expand your influence in the world you must build shipyards and develop trade relations with the other countries of the world. But your resources are limited and you must carefully consider the trades that you make. Once you give in to one of the conditions a character cannot be resurrected if your empire is destroyed. To save yourself from bankruptcy, you need to keep building up your empire, and making the right decisions. To make the right decisions you will need to consider how much gold you have, your economy, the goods that your population demands and the strength of the armies that you have. In this strategy game you are aiming to build your own empire and become the next emperor of the Atlantic Ocean coast. You start out by gathering the resources that your empire needs and then building up your army. As you make deals with the world you collect different types of resources, and as you build new ports and trade routes you can distribute these resources between different locations to your advantage. RESOURCESThere are different types of resources in the game: iron ore, copper, wood, lumber, coal, gold and silver. Your empire will need these resources to trade with the other players and gain influence in the game. All the resources that you use for trade are stored in the Empire warehouse, and are never left in the buildings of your cities. When your economy grows and your population increases you will need more resources and to earn more money. Some of the resources are produced automatically as part of the game: you will start out with iron ore in every location and coal in every location except the capital city. As you expand you will also find copper, wood and lumber in various locations, and gold and silver cannot be produced automatically, but must be bought in the trade market from foreign nations. If you have enough money you can also buy iron ore, coal, wood and lumber from the same nation, but you will also lose part of your income if you do this. GOALS TO AVOID The economy of your empire is very important in Lusitania. While your initial economy is very limited you will find that there are three conditions in the game that can destroy
