The world's most famous tool for manipulating images can now be installed on Raspberry Pi 2 and is now more than a decade old. Cheeky has released an officially endorsed version of Photoshop Elements for Raspberry Pi. And if that wasn't enough they have released a customized version of macOS as well. So to make things easier Photoshop Elements has been ported to the following operating systems: Raspberry Pi 2 with Raspbian ( NOOBs) with a few caveats however it cannot edit RAW images or create UHD videos. Only small videos are possible. Photoshop Elements is only good for quick edits. Raspbmc. Refer to the Raspbmc Video Tutorial for Raspbmc. NetBSD (read the tutorial for BSD version) Ubuntu (NOOBs). Refer to the Raspbian tutorial Debian (read the tutorial for Raspbian) Android ( read the tutorial for Android version) Android developers can also install the Android SDK and the Android NDK to develop Android applications. You can follow our tutorial on installing Android Studio on Raspberry Pi 2. Read our tutorial about installing the Android SDK and NDK on Raspberry Pi 2. Android applications, which run on Android, run on the Linux kernel and OpenGL, the graphic library used in Android. Windows users can download the installer for Photoshop Elements from the Photoshop website. Unfortunately, the Windows installer cannot be run on macOS or Linux. You'll have to build from source. It's easier to compile Photoshop Elements on macOS and Linux. To start our tutorial we'll show you how to build Photoshop Elements on a macOS computer that's running OSX 10.10 Yosemite. Please note that you need a version of macOS or Linux that's at least as new as macOS 10.10 Yosemite. Please don't use anything older than that. You'll also need the following tools: Of course, please read the license before using Photoshop Elements. The best way to install Photoshop Elements is to compile the source code yourself. That's because commercial software vendors don't give you the source code and we haven't tried the built-in installer yet. We're assuming 388ed7b0c7

Most Canadian preschoolers living in poverty are in situation where they are educated in an environment that feels unsafe to them, says a report released Tuesday. The study was released by The Children's Lawyer Program at the University of Ottawa and is based on their work with Canadian families. About one-quarter of children in the Greater Toronto Area are living in poverty, which is higher than the national average. The report describes a third of preschool children living in poverty: 73 per cent of children in poverty are living with a single parent. 54 per cent of preschoolers in poverty are male. 57 per cent of preschoolers in poverty have been exposed to at least one volatile relationship with a parent or a caregiver before starting school. More than one-third of children living in poverty have experienced multiple volatile relationships with parents or caregivers before starting school. 26 per cent of children in poverty have experienced the death or serious illness of a parent/caregiver before starting school. 13 per cent of children in poverty have experienced the death or serious illness of a parent or caregiver before starting school. (The report notes that 20 per cent of children with one parent had a step-parent in the home, which can create challenges.) For 23 per cent of children, a parent or caregiver's substance abuse has resulted in the child moving out of the home. More than a third of children in poverty have been exposed to multiple volatile relationships with parents or caregivers before starting school. The report was based on hundreds of family law cases. The study's report recommended a number of steps to help children living in poverty: Set out a clear plan in law and policy for the support children need to succeed in school and in life. Change access to tax benefits and services to help low-income people. Create affordable child care. Better enforce laws to ensure unsafe situations for children are removed. Increase income inequality and ensure there is a minimum wage that is sufficient to allow parents to raise their children. Individuals and organizations can download the report here. Moderate to high income workers who opt to stay home to care for a sick child or relative are being asked to pay a 6.2 per cent payroll tax as part of the federal government's $25 million coronavirus wage subsidy. At least two reports from outside observers make clear the levy
