What's the origin of the phrase "once in a lifetime"? For example, "You once said that I'd be the best dancer in the world." Is there any data source from where this phrase is originated, on what occasion the phrase was first used? A: As far as I am aware, once in a lifetime actually predates this phrase and is the first citation that matches your request. The expression once in a lifetime is from a phrase in La Fontaine's fables (17th century): Un homme n'a jamais deux amours d'une seule, à la fois. And Google Books turns up the earliest evidence from Elmer Gantry (1926) by Sinclair Lewis: "I'm mighty glad you hold it against me," he said, still speaking rapidly. "It isn't that. My old dad was a railroad man, and my mother was an English lady, and the English are very clannish, after all, they are the people that gave us our language. She used to write poetry
