Q: Does the character of □□□□□□□□□□□□□□□□ have any influence on the way the sentence is interpreted? In my native language there is a sentence that goes something like this: □[□□□] □□□[□□] □□□□□□□□□□ □□□□□□□□□□ My interpretation of it would be something like "However, it is not necessarily true that". But

I'm curious if there's any influence on the way the sentence is interpreted if I replace the part after the □□□□□□□□ with □□□□□□ to make the sentence "It is not necessarily true that (the character) never happens, rather it is not necessarily true that". Like for example: □□□□□[□□]

---

I'd appreciate if someone could help me understand if there is any influence on the way the sentence is interpreted in this case, if the character of □□□□□□□□ makes any difference to how it's interpreted. A: It depends on the context if I'm right. But I'm curious if there's any influence on the way the sentence is interpreted if I replace the part after the □□□□□□□□

with □□□□□ to make the sentence "It is not necessarily true that (the character) never happens, rather it is not necessarily true that". It doesn't change the meaning. Both are true statements, meaning that □□{□□□□} never happens and □□{□□□□} never happens. □□□□□□□□□□ is understandable but not understandable in only one way. You can interpret it in several ways as you wanted to. But you can not turn the `□□□□□□□□` to `□□□□□ □□□□`
