"grantee" on the land is not in any manner of a security interest. Accordingly, I dissent. COCHRAN, J., concurring. The practicality of this matter is evidenced by the emphasis on the existence of a mortgage interest and no distinguishing, ownership interest is given to purchasers. As most sensible people would, for the purposes of this analysis, say whether there is a mortgage or not, it is the duty of the court to give full validity to a very important document that every purchaser should see. For over 40 years, a longstanding though untested theory has held that obesity is a risk factor for the development of atherosclerotic vascular disease. As the large cohort of menopausal women who have been followed over the past 2 decades has matured and begun to approach 20 years of follow-up, we have examined the hypothesis that obesity is a risk factor for the development of coronary atherosclerotic disease in this cohort. Prospective data from our cohort of health professionals now includes 4,344 women, initially free of cardiovascular disease, and has been followed for 22 years. For the present study, we examined factors that might modify the association between obesity and carotid wall intimal-medial thickening (CIMT), a non-invasive quantitative index of atherosclerotic burden. The study group includes 3,143 women free of cardiovascular disease and hypertension at baseline, who have been followed for 18 years. Anthropometric indices, including weight, height, weight at menarche, and waist circumference were measured at baseline and at follow-up visits (mean of 5.0 years). CIMT has been measured by B-mode ultrasound after an overnight fast at baseline and at follow-up and adjusted for the effects of age, race, cohort, baseline cholesterol, and time since menopause. In a univariate analysis, weight change ($P = 0.015$) and weight at menarche ($P = 0.004$) were associated with CIMT. In a multivariate model, weight change ($P = 0.009$) was associated with CIMT. Obese women who reduce their weight or become non-obese have lower risk for the development of atherosclerotic disease than do obese women who remain obese.In addition to the moon, I really think a lot of people would welcome an opportunity to explore the role of water and the potential for extraterrestrial life.
