At first glance, Photoshop looks daunting, but once you master the basic layers, it is a powerful tool. You can use the same techniques for screen and print editing. Don't be intimidated by Photoshop's intimidating-looking menus.

For new users, Photoshop is a de facto standard, but not everyone has Photoshop, or wants to invest in Photoshop. It is also difficult to get new users to understand why there are so many settings, shortcuts and features in Photoshop that you might not need, especially when they are so time consuming to access. Photoshop Elements may be a perfect alternative for people who don't want to invest in the more complicated Photoshop toolset but are also tired of new technology being useless after a couple months. Photoshop Elements is a standalone application, not an add-on or plugin. But it does have integration with some other programs via plugins. We will go through some of the features of Photoshop Elements in detail. If there is anything else you are interested in then give us a thumbs up. We will be back with more useful Photoshop tips and tricks. Is Photoshop Elements for You? News CISOS Day Three: Karapetyan called to order on women's newsrooms Reporter Yerevan, Armenia - As a presidium of the CISOS (Council of International Visitors to the Republic of Armenia) has declared and opened its session, Commissioner of Diaspora's Department of Culture, Arts,

Tourism and Sport of the Republic of Armenia Karen Karapetyan once again discussed the status of women in Armenia and Armenia as a whole. "Many people come to visit the Republic of Armenia from the CIS but in most cases they are looking for a male job, as a tourist who doesn't know what to do in the country, and if he visits an organization, it's a men's organization. " It seems that

Armenia (as the country) and women are not a priority, even though Armenia is a small country and Armenia is bigger than some EU countries. That's why I think we should be more active and try to make Armenia known in the CIS, to make more people come to us, but let's be quite honest, there's a lot of ignorance here and there, and we need to change that," Karen Karapetyan said. He also noted that even though everyone was talking about the corruption in Diaspora at the CISOS Day One, no one had mentioned it at the session, except him. "This is because it is very difficult to talk about it without offending anyone because we don't know who is corrupt, and who is not corrupt. " The Commissioner went on to say that in Armenia itself, corruption is the order of the day, especially for bureaucrats and those in the government. "As I said on day one, I don't want to discuss the corrupt officials in Armenia - they're few and far between, and also not many have come to talk to us. There are only the officials who really look like they want to be honest, and they need to be honest and pay taxes. But if we deal with the corruption in Armenia, we will not be able to change the country. " At first, the Commissioner said it was difficult to find women in the government, but then, he stressed that there are female politicians, and then he asked to name them. "They can be here today," Karapetyan replied. "Oh," he said

[Relationship between suicide risk and personality traits in clinical population]. With a clinical sample of 38 patients consecutively admitted for psychiatric treatment at the Helvetic University Hospital, Zurich, the authors have assessed a series of personality traits. They have done this according to an inventory of Klein & Young (1975). The authors have investigated the relationship between suicide risk and these personality traits with the help of a questionnaire developed by Pompili (1978). This questionnaire is based on the risk of suicide (either current or past suicide attempts) and has been filled in by the clinician. In this study such an instrument has been used with the object of predicting the future risk of suicidal behaviour. A significant relationship between suicide risk and personality traits was found. In particular, hedonism (egoism) was related with a higher risk of suicide.¹ Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a substrate structure for mounting and more particularly to a substrate structure for mounting which has a substrate made by molding metal base plate (hereinafter referred to as a molded plate and a printed circuit board mounted on the substrate for assembling into a liquid-crystal module. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a molded plate having a plurality of mounting pads around a center hole for mounting as a substrate, having a narrow width, and a high pitch and a printed circuit board having a plurality of electric components mounted thereon are used to compose a module having a liquid-crystal display panel mounted thereon. A known method for mounting the two substrate is to insert the molded plate into a notch part formed along the periphery of the module frame and then to tightly press the molded plate by a jig and a screw to mount the molded plate on the printed circuit board. In this case, the molded plate, as shown in FIG. 13, is mounted in a state in which the notch part of the frame is closed, and therefore the force for tightly pressing the molded plate by the jig and the screw can be efficiently applied. However, the frame opening has to be closed by a jig, and thus a problem of expensive jigs is encountered. Further, the total weight of the unit is increased by the jig and the screw. Further, the total height of the unit is increased when the molded plate is pressed and mounted. If the molded plate is pressed without sufficient strength, a gap is generated between the frame and
