Q: Function not recognizing correct value I have a function that is supposed to check if the value of a variable in the function is equal to 0 or 1. If it is equal to 0 then the function should return true, if it is equal to 1 then false. My problem is that the function seems to always return true, even when the variable has a value equal to 1. Here is my function: function checker(num){ if(!(num = "0") &!(num = "1")){ alert("Please enter a valid answer.") } else { return true } } I tried using document.write() to see where the function was failing and I got a message saying that the function had failed at the return statement. A: First up: You can't assign to the LHS of an =. You're assigning to the RHS. Secondly: You were missing { and } after the and, but you still weren't using those correctly, you were missing return inside the if statement, and you need to check for == instead of = for numbers: function checker(num) { if (!(num == "0" || num == "1")) { alert("Please enter a valid answer.") } else { return true; } } Note that your input validation is much less robust than what you're using for output. Also, the above will naturally bail if you enter anything besides 0 or 1. Finally, a number is not a string. If you want to check if a string represents a number, use isNaN() or isFinite(): function checker(num) { if (!(!isNaN(num) && isFinite(num))) { alert("Please enter a valid answer.") } else { return true; } } A human eosinophil protein X (EPG-10) is differentially expressed in asthmatics during allergic reactions and is associated with anti-inflammatory cytokines. Risk of primary biliary cirrhosis in a large cohort of patients with chronic viral hepatitis C receiving interferon therapy: relationships with hepatitis B e antigen status and alanine aminotransferase values. We evaluated the risk of primary biliary cirrhosis (PBC) in 211,691 chronic hepatitis C virus (HCV) seropositive patients (HCV-C) treated with interferon (IFN-alpha) for a total of 2,461,021.25 patient-years of follow-up. The cumulative incidence of PBC was significantly greater in women with HCV-C than in the corresponding HCV-C men (4.4% in women vs. 2.8% in men; P = 0.001; Relative risk, RR = 1.49; 95% confidence interval, CI = 1.07-2.06). Women with HCV-C carrying HBeAg presented with a significantly greater risk of PBC than men carrying HBeAg (P = 0.007; RR = 1.75; CI = 1.08-2.84). In contrast, women with HCV-C carrying HBeAg, with normal alanine aminotransferase (ALT) values, had a significantly lower risk of PBC than HBeAg-negative women (P = 0.006; RR = 0.44; CI = 0.22-0.91). Women with genotypes of HCV-C other than 2 or 3 (1a/3a) had a risk of PBC that was significantly greater than that in men with genotypes of HCV-C other than 2 or 3 (1a/3a) (P = 0.01; RR = 1.44; CI = 1.05-1.99). On the basis of these findings, our data suggest that, in women, the risk of PBC is not substantially reduced by the presence of HBeAg and that a protective effect can be exerted by the presence of HBeAg in women with normal ALT values.Q: How to properly use Dropbox SDK to upload files from a non-activity class I am using Dropbox SDK 3.2.1.
