Greetings, adventurer. We are the staff of Shiny, a publishing company for games. Our games are user-friendly action games developed using a variety of genres, such as action RPG, action fantasy, and action science fiction. Although we specialize in action games, we do not only make action games. We also like to dabble in a variety of genres as a way to broaden our content offerings. We are looking for more ideas, so please do send us feedback, including new gameplay mechanics and game ideas. When you make a Shiny account, it is easy to communicate with us and play games. The games you play with your Shiny account become accessible to all your Shiny accounts. Please enjoy Shiny's games and games from other publishing companies, and we hope to hear your feedback. A member of the Dutch parliament has been ordered to pay a fine after an investigation by a parliamentary control commission found he used official funds to clean his office, print free newspapers, buy food in parliament, and to burn a pile of confetti outside his office. VVD parliamentarian Pauline Krikke was fined 600 euros (US$671) after a parliamentary control commission found that she wrote checks that were not authorized from her parliamentary office account after the national election last summer. Krikke, who represents the Aalsmeer political party in the Dutch provincial parliament, was reprimanded by parliament for the misuse of her office funds. The commission said Krikke used her parliamentary office account to buy food and pay for work on her house, printing free newspapers, and burning paper at her office. The control commission ruled that Krikke cannot use parliament funds for cleaning her office or buying newspapers and other freebies. Krikke promised in 2009 to write off most of the checks she made from the account, but has missed payments, bringing in five-month arrears, the control commission said. "The penalties are paid on the date on which the arrears are ascertained," the control commission said in a statement. Krikke was a municipal councilor in the German town of Aalsmeer from 2005 to 2009.
