By “re-playing” this match in the cloud, FIFA players can experience the exact same player-to-player, ball-to-ball, and ball-to-goal interactions that will be used in FIFA 22 and beyond. This technology brings a completely new level of authenticity to gameplay, delivering an immersive soccer experience that matches the precision of the real world. FIFA 20 introduced five new game mechanics: Pro Player Highlights, Player Impact, Player Possession, Player Intensity and Player Intelligence. In FIFA 22, Real Player Motion Technology will further enhance the sense of realism. Players will gain access to an endless supply of Pro Player Highlights directly from the player’s personal highlight reel. The player’s own unique play patterns will affect the effectiveness of Pro Player Highlight creation. For example, a player whose hero run has you running along the wing in pursuit of an interception may suddenly sprint into open space and receive a Pro Player Highlight. Content Creation has been reworked. After allocating just three Pro Player Highlight Moments and a Ball Tackling from the game from season to season, Pro Player Highlight Moments have been dramatically increased to five, and the Ball Tackling has been removed. Content Curation updates Pro Player Highlight Moments and Ball Tackling to be more contextually specific. Players have now a total of 30 Pro Player Highlight Moments to choose from, the five Moments which can be created on a pitch-by-pitch basis increase to 20, and there are two fewer Moments for Ball Tackling. Opponent Pro Player Camera Angles have been reduced to adapt gameplay to the type of attack and defense played. One example of this is the increased number of Pro Player Highlight Moments available in the case of Counter-Attack Defense, where the player may become isolated from the team. In Player Strength Drafting, players can choose their own line-up for the game, including all players that appear in the top 20 in the official rankings. The Line-up Assistant is at the heart of the system, dictating which type of players appear in which order, as well as which teams of players are available. In Player Positions, goalkeepers have been adjusted. On the active team, the goalkeeper is the defender lined up closest to the opponents’ goal, while the goalkeeper on the defending team is the one closest to their own goal, irrespective of how far it is from

FIFA may be called the ultimate game of football, but it wasn't always that way. If you come from a background where the word "football" is a misnomer, don't worry - we get you. FIFA is a franchise made by two teams; Electronic Arts (EA) and FIFA itself. Their partnership has resulted in a collection of some of the most authentic and enjoyable soccer games ever created. FIFA has been a strong force in the eSport industry for years, with each game making it bigger and better. You might be wondering what this has to do with what's coming out, let's find out. What's the deal with the license? You might have seen sports movies that have football as a big part of the title, but that doesn't actually mean that they are the property of FIFA itself. Electronic Arts owns the FIFA trademark, so they can play in any sports game with that word in the title. However, FIFA actually has a great deal of control over the football aspect of the game. EA Sports had a license to use licensed teams and FIFA-associated players from the real life brand of the same name, but they don't have the same right to make the rules, score keeping or gameplay. As a result, they have the freedom to do whatever they please with the game. They can make changes, such as equalizing the field, changing the pass direction or any other issue that pertains to football. There are likely quite a few issues that the license prevents them from touching, but overall they do create some very fun and entertaining football games. If you've been reading this far, you may have already heard of issues related to the racism controversy from last year. EA Sports was fully aware of these issues and did not have a racist intent, but failed to do their due diligence. As a result, they had to have the player packs that was released back in September of last year be re-released. While the problem isn't quite fixed just yet, EA has been smart about the situation and not release any additional packs. What's coming in FIFA? FIFA developer EA Canada has been creating a new version of the game every single year, and this new one is no different. Overall, it comes up as pretty good, but there are a few things that don't mesh as well as you would expect.
