Swarming Planet is a vertically scrolling 2.5D action-adventure shooter set in a dark science-fiction universe of necromania and carnivorous space zombies. It is played from an isometric perspective, in which the action takes place vertically, but the playable characters are 3D-animated. Chasing for Survival is a match-3 action game, designed to a very high standard. The levels were designed with a generous supply of unique puzzle elements that challenge your reflexes and tactical thinking. A huge expanding and uniquely pixelated level-set! Starting with only one little spaceship, you'll have to get around the level, collecting stars and unicorns (and hating the unicorns) to keep going. The game is a platform game in the truest sense, but with a level-set where no living creature could live at all. Unicorns, starlings, grasshoppers, rabbits, and the like live in the level in great numbers, but mostly the difficulty comes from the fact that these creatures are two-dimensional. And what unicorns! A beautiful art style with a pixel-art style to it, imitating the look of pixelated art of more recent era. Pixelated graphics makes for an even more interesting game-play. Vivid colors that a great pixel-art style gives you an imaginative world that you want to visit. The story is not forced into the game in any way and is told in a quite comical way. Most of the narrative elements are missing, but the vast amount of gameplay is really what counts here. Multiplayer is meant as a local LAN-game. It doesn't have any online-competition on offer, but it is also not possible to play the game over the internet. The map will be getting an expansion soon. This should give a much larger playing area as well as many new game-modes. For anyone who plays a lot of match-3 games, this will be an amazing game with great match-3 gameplay. Those with a bit of an imagination should find a great game here. You really have to play this one! PLUS FOR YOU! – This game is free, without any buttons or advertisement – No copy protection whatsoever – No need to buy anything Get your mouse/keyboard and crack yourself a unicorn :) I think the best part of the game is

American Angst is a choice-based text-based survival horror text-based interactive fiction with minimal graphics and sound effects. It has been inspired by games like Choose your own Adventure, Futurama, MASH and Clue. It's 3D but there's no graphics. The narrative is pretty straightforward. You wake up in a dark black room with no memory of who you are or why you're there. You have no weapons and you have to survive the night. Along the way, you will read newspapers and watch television news broadcasts in the not so far future where a new kind of TV called "Phonetic Television" is used to replace actual broadcast TV. The In-Game Menu You can choose to play American Angst in the vanilla edition or the Steam Deluxe Edition. The vanilla edition of American Angst features the following major game features: Interactive game - You will have to help yourself survive and solve problems by reading, re-reading, searching for hints and by choosing your path through a series of narrative/choice-based text-based multiple-choice questions. Text-based - No graphics or sound effects, everything is text. Choice-based - You don't have to follow the story, you can follow your own path by making choices in any order you see fit. Over 60 choices - You can make an awful lot of choices in a game like American Angst, most of the time more than 70. This gives the game a re-playability that other choice-based games usually lack. Over 15 in-game hours - Each choice, each path you take, is a separate in-game hour. An in-game hour can last anything from 5 to 30 minutes depending on your choices. Some examples of choice: Are you going to: A) Knock on the door? B) Push it open? C) Call the police? D) Check if the door is locked? E) Sneak in? F) Look for keys? G) Leave the room? H) Return to the morning room? I) Go for the next door? J) Check the map for the next door? K) Open the next door? L) Return to the morning room? M) Go downstairs to check the map for the exit? N) Go through the neighboring room to see if there's a loose floorboard? P) Check if there's a phone? Q) Try c9d1549cdd

There are 5 game modes with different goals and levels of difficulty. Explore them to discover more secrets and unlock them all. And this is not only a story mode where you follow a linear plot. Each stage of the game in which you are challenged, will become a more difficult task for you. You will have to discover and master your abilities to avoid death and last as long as possible. Play in the game modes to find all the secrets of the game and as many skills as you want. If you pass the level of difficulty it will become increasingly complex. The environment will be filled with enemies. You will find various power ups: use them to become stronger, faster and more aggressive, like you always wanted. And more, the game also offers you Achievements and Trophies, to show your skills. Features: The Cyber World: Gameplay in the cyber world ByteFamily. Explore the landscape that you live in and discover more secrets. And always a challenge for you. The environment is surrounded by enemies. Contents show] Description The Accursed Army Pack fits into three slots (5 cards) and has a special action card (Sacrifice Young Monarch). Game impact Due to its size, it is quite effective in early battles because it blocks common cards, which are otherwise free for most early-game plays. A 2-2 split between Scout and Bandit, the Accursed Army Pack creates a reliable defense team. However, in a 3-2 split it becomes a little bit harder to play. Scout decks thrive on the synergy with a 3/4 Scout, and Bandit decks normally are split fairly evenly between Bronze and Diamond. A 3/4 Scout is already a hard card to come by, and a 2/3 Scout leaves room for other decks to try and maximize their efficiency. In my experience, even with a 3-1 split, you're not likely to survive for long if you don't get in (i.e. a 4-1) against anything less than a 3-2 split. Note that at only 5 cards (3-4 split), it can actually share a slot with a Call of the Dead (to make "Sacrifice young Monarch") or a different army packet (to make "Boost one neighbor's army"). And given that single cards are generally well worth about 1 card (i.e., after the cost comes into play), you often save a card having a lower egg buff while gaining a card in return. Note that there is still value in the starting army bags to use the latter effect. A 3-1 split is quite achievable in practice, and is not as risky as a 2-2 split against anything near a 3-3 split, which is sure to knock you dead. A 3-3 split, however, renders the Accursed Army Pack powerless (except for reserving slots), and will likely cause it to be a 3-4 split before you can play the additional card. Of course, you can also always rely on Royal Overlord to block anything. Effectively the army pack is for killing scout+bronze decks when playing 5 cards, for killing scout+diamond decks when playing 6 cards, and for killing bronze+diamond decks when playing 7 cards. The relative power of the knight in bronze and the deadeye in bronze+diamond would be a bit different of course. The army pack appears not to be effective when played on Platinum and

Critadel is a new type of Action Game made for the GBA. The game features an incredibly open world and an unlimited number of weapons and items. Your character may equip any of those weapons or items, and they may be upgraded to give you better damage, better bonuses or faster reload times. When you find equipment, you can equip it to your character immediately, or you can save it for later. Your character will travel through a branching, open world structure, where no set path is set in stone. Critadel is the epitome of replayability, because your actions and characters will have different effects each time you play. Critadel includes three playable characters, each with their own starting weapons and items that grow more powerful the more you use them. The game is set in an area called Babel, a gigantic mechanical structure built by aliens as a giant machine for gathering information. After landing, the aliens vanished and the tower gradually fell into the hands of an evil faction that seeks to obtain the Alchemical Manifestation of the Gods. A mysterious, ancient religious cult uses the tower to connect to the Divine itself and seeks to gain control of the tower for their own ends.  Disclaimer  If you agree that this game is not for you, then please stop reading now. Highlanders vs Waratahs: May the best two win, says CSK Sports May 04, 2018 Share Photo Courtesy www.pensonimages.com by Rohan Cameron Match Preview: Durban-based South African side the Highlanders, who finished the 2017/18 season undefeated and first in the Nelson Mandela Bay Premiership, will take on Northern Hemisphere powerhouse the NSW Waratahs in a battle that pits the two best teams in the tournament against one another on the 22nd of May 2018. The Highlanders will be confident of recording a second straight win after surpassing their Grand Final defeat to the Lions 38-6 in Round 4. New signing All Blacks halfback Aaron Cruden has committed to playing for The Highlanders this season, having reportedly signed a two-year deal. The Waratahs will enter the fixture as underdogs, having lost their last two games against Australian rivals Melbourne Rebels and Queensland Reds, and having not won in Durban since the 2008 Super 12 final. “No matter what team we meet we’ll fight to the death,” said Highlanders coach Nick Stielow. “They both have quality players, but it’ll be more [about] their approach and system. We’ll play our own game, adapting to the opposition’s.” “They’re probably the two best teams in the tournament and it’ll be a great game,” chipped in winger Samisoni Virimi. “We will take it game by game but we’re going to try to win the two, I’ve done that in Sydney before
