Severance package A severance package, severance allowance or severance pay is a financial benefit paid to an employee in consideration of resigning. Severance pay is often offered to employees (particularly those with a long tenure or seniority) at the time they are let go. Severance pay is often offered to induce the employee to leave so that the company may have an employee to replace him or her. The severance pay may be paid out over a period of time or it may be provided as a lump sum. Severance pay is often based on length of service, job function, qualifications and years of seniority. The salary of the employee at his or her previous job may be part of the severance package. In some countries, such as Great Britain, severance pay is a statutory entitlement, giving the employee certain rights in the event of dismissal. In the US, "severance pay" may mean different things; The US Supreme Court has held that the Federal government cannot mandate the specific amount of "severance pay" that must be provided to employees in a federal (non-military) job.
