An electrical connector is mounted on a printed circuit board (PCB) and interconnects different electrical components on the PCB or electrically connects the PCB to different electrical components. It is desirable for such connectors to be designed to have improved electrical and mechanical characteristics. As application technology continues to develop, there is a constant need for improvement in connectors. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an insulated gas- or fluid-filled hollow fiber membrane and a process for the production thereof. The hollow fiber membrane is suitable for separation of an organic substance or an inorganic substance dissolved in water.

2. Description of the Related Art It is known that an electric field can be applied to a liquid to cause dielectrophoresis (DEP) which is a phenomenon in which a particle moves toward the direction of the strongest electric field. This phenomenon is of interest for the separation and concentration of particles, for example, in the blood treatment, catamenial materials treatment, and protein-producing culture of microorganisms, and the use of a phenomenon obtained by combining the particle immobilization due to dielectrophoresis with the reaction of particles in a liquid due to molecular reaction is drawing attention in the industrial field. Further, in recent years, microcellular porous membranes have drawn attention as organic membranes, and JP-A No. 2000-105112 describes an organic membrane having microcells, specifically a polyvinylidene fluoride (PVDF) hollow fiber membrane as a porous membrane. JP-A No. 2000-105112 also describes the introduction of a polymerizable monomer as a pore forming agent into PVDF, a manufacturing process therefor, and a PVDF hollow fiber membrane having a diameter of 0.3 to 30 mm, a pore diameter of 6d1f23a050
