A: If you want to access the PDF file, be sure that you don't have any popup blocker installed. You could test it with this page (site is not safe, no means to verify trust): For some pages Google gives a "technical issue" error (seems not working). Google seems quite restrictive on the subject so the only way is to use the library of the browser you are using to access the file. The same happens for the Zip file generated by the class Zippers. By the way: you don't have a specified format of the ZIP archive, by default it uses 7-ZIP. So it is a third-party class working as a ZIP reader. In most cases it is enough, so you can just ignore it in this case. Nearly half of the anglers surveyed for a new survey conducted by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission in support of the proposed land grab of Neuse River bottomlands by Apex has said they believe hunting should be left to state wildlife officers. The survey was conducted by a professional, independent polling company. Sam Curran, commission chairman, said in a news release that the survey's results "show overwhelming support for the enactment of the proposed legislation that will protect the Neuse River watershed's forests, wetlands and coastal plain from ruthless development." The survey supports an amendment to House Bill 242 that would give North Carolina's Division of Natural Resources responsibility over the federally authorized land grab plan. The amendment calls for the state to solicit federal and local assistance in managing the land. Other survey findings include: • Nearly 80 percent are against the takeover of public land. • A majority believe the land should be managed for a broad range of wildlife purposes. • An overwhelming majority believe poaching should be handled by state wildlife officers. • A majority believe the land should be managed and controlled by the public in the public's interest. • A small majority of those surveyed said they believe the proposed plan to take over Neuse River bottomlands should
