Importing three tables in mysql? I've got a PHP framework that is using the Doctrine ORM to work with models (what models are stored in a database). I'm having some trouble importing data from a table into a model. The table is named activity It has (among other things) a field named order_id The table stores a long number A normal way to import data would be something like $Activity = new Activity(); $Activity->setId(4455)

In honor of the 150th anniversary of this highly esteemed educational institution, The Cap Times has compiled the following articles on the history of Columbia's University College, and how that history has shaped the city. Nimble fingers you can leave your stove on? Better grab a grip of a crane when Columbia's flood waters rise. For more than two decades, the University of South Carolina has trained small teams of citizens to manage the mobilization of boats, boats and boat into the buildings of Columbia University Hospital and the Medical Center when public infrastructure and infrastructure is wiped away by disasters. An award-winning guide is required for photography in the Columbia area. Buy your photo pass today! The Pearl-Washing Process In the late 1800s, as the city's population began booming, a need was created for a dependable source of clean, fresh water. The situation had become so bad that a special industrial process had to be developed that would clean the water well enough to protect the health of those who would drink it. The process, water filtration, is called "sludge removal" to this day. It's one of the main reasons why the city's drinking water looks so clear. People Place The first place to start planning for a visit to Columbia is to decide where you want to visit. There are dozens and dozens of must-see attractions that are nearby, from the mountains to the Palmetto Golf Course. A new exhibit, called "Talking About Citizenship," has opened at the Museum
