Women in mobile commerce Women in Mobile Commerce According to a 2012 survey commissioned by Phorm, a digital marketing company, one in two consumers says that the voice of a woman when shopping is more important than that of a man, and 36% of women shopping with a smartphone agree. All of these shoppers are women with cell phones. To appeal to women who use their phones as the primary means of mobile commerce, a phone must include features that are personal to them. For example, a 2011 survey by Millennial Marketing Group and PromoServe found that only 27% of mobile phone users polled agree that they use mobile phones to pay for things. In contrast, according to the National Retail Federation, more than two-thirds of women say that their smartphone is their preferred shopping device. Mobile email The mobile device is a fantastic platform for personalizing email with special offers,
