induced remission in a patient with Graves' disease and concurrent systemic lupus erythematosus. Graves' disease (GD) is a common autoimmune disease characterized by hyperthyroidism and autoantibody production. Its autoimmune nature is confirmed by the finding of serum autoantibodies such as anti-thyroid peroxidase and anti-thyroglobulin, which are implicated in the pathogenesis of GD. Subclinical activity in the form of antithyroid antibodies or spontaneous remissions of GD have been described. A 39-year-old male

Airlines in which two passengers on a domestic flight at Pontiac, Michigan were killed in a December 1977 crash, causing the longest shutdown of an airline in U.S. history. The event was a major blow to the airline's ongoing reorientation from a regional carrier to an international player. Three other airports were closed as a result of the bombing: San Francisco International Airport, Newark International Airport, and John F. Kennedy International Airport. As a result of the airport closures, all flights were grounded and not resumed for months. The attack On
