why its a good thing. Mixed in the legs: the mixed in malignancy (MIM) phenotype of isolated micronodular lung disease (ILD). Although a significant proportion of ILD patients have micronodular lung involvement, it has been difficult to distinguish between benign and malignant disease. The working definition of ILD associated with benign nodules has not been clearly defined. To identify the immunologic phenotype of isolated micronodular lung disease (IML) that required a lung resection. Preoperative, perioperative and postoperative tissue and serum samples were obtained from a set of 13 patients with IML and 17 patients with nonmixed ILD who had undergone a lobectomy, wedge resection or limited segmental resection. Biopsy specimens were analyzed on
