Description of the Related Art Japanese Patent Application Publication No. 2006-028667 (JP 2006-028667 A) discloses an example of a conventional brake pedal system for a vehicle. The conventional brake pedal system is equipped with an electric motor that uses electric power of an internal combustion engine as a driving source. The brake pedal system is configured to control an operation of the electric motor according to an operation of an accelerator pedal. The electric motor applies a braking force to a brake pedal. When the brake pedal is depressed, the electric motor is activated. A return spring is mounted to the brake pedal to return the brake pedal to an initial position when the electric motor is deactivated. The brake pedal system is adapted to implement a function of releasing the brakes when the accelerator pedal is deactivated. In the brake pedal system, the brake pedal is locked by a connection rod and a spring member. An operation of a brake pedal depressing operation member is detected by a switch. Whether the electric motor is activated is determined based on the output of the switch. However, since the connection rod is easily affected by an ambient temperature, the brake pedal is not necessarily locked at a correct stroke. As a result, a braking force of the brake pedal may not be ensured. It is important to establish a lock state of the brake pedal
