I need to do a count of number of visitors from each country and then a total of all the visits. A: You can use the 'q'' command to query the current, and the past one hour, raw databases. raw data is stored in the sysmaster.db, which is a replica of a master.sql file. To get the count of visits from a certain country, query the current hour's data: select count(), username, country from sysmaster.country where country= 'United States' To get the count of the past hour's data select count(), username, country from sysmaster.country where country= 'United States' There are many options to aggregate the result, but I think a simple COUNT will do for this case. Re: Sade and Pain (Longview) Wow, even this thread is full of great responses. I really hadn't considered the Sade/Pain connection. My partner and I went to college in Dallas together. I was living with a friend in Longview and went down to visit him/her for a few days one weekend a couple of years ago. I arrived late, hung out in the guest room while getting settled, and then later when my friend was ready to go out they took me to a bar down the street from the place they were staying. We hit it pretty early that night and we drank a lot. In the middle of the night, they were pulling us from a house party up the street. (We were at about 5:30AM when they picked us up.)
