How do I make my page have a picture to show off in a standard resolution of 1024x768 but the text in between the large picture will be larger, both in character and in overall area? So if I want my CSS to make the text larger and the image smaller, it would look something like. How do I make sure I have my max line count for text correct? So all in all I am wanting to accomplish something like this, but only in one direction because I do not want my page to look so messy that it is hard to read. I have tried many different ways that I have come across in this forum and other places on the internet and none of them have done what I wanted to do. Do you think you can help? Below is one of the ways I have tried to do it. I will copy and paste some of it so you can see. This is a very large paragraph of text that is going to have a picture in the centre of the paragraph. So I am going to make the text take up about 1/4 of the total width of the paragraph Text(size should be controlled by max-width) Text (size should be controlled by max c6a93da74d
